

ABSTRACT

A network request is routed through a network infrastructure to a network device. To make a determination of whether to accept or reject the network request, a network address from which the network request originated is identified by communicating with the network infrastructure. The network request is accepted only upon a determination that the identified network address is authorized.